Love Letters from William Stringfield to Maria Love

Introduction:

William Williams Stringfield was born on May 7, 1837 in Nashville, TN. He served as a captain with the Thomas Legion in the south during the Civil War. After the war, Stringfield built his home in Haywood County, NC (Western Carolina University). He married Maria M. Love on January 2, 1871 in Haywood County (North Carolina County Registers of Deeds).

This group of letters is addressed to Maria M. Love from William Williams Stringfield. Written in 1865 after his time as a Civil War soldier, Stringfield uses the first letter to assure Love of his affection. He also proposes to her in the letter. His language focuses on “wooing” Love and assuring her that they would have a happy marriage. Stringfield’s second letter addresses Love’s request to postpone their wedding. He attempts to convince her to reconsider because there is still plenty of time before the set date. He assures her of his love and admiration for her, and he requests that she write him back.

The first letter is written on fiber-based lined paper and has two vertical folds and one horizontal fold. The letter takes up four pages and the original page, before folds has 16 x 20 dimensions. It is written as a type of booklet. The first page looks like a standard sized page, while the second and third pages fold out into a longer landscape oriented page. The fourth page is written on the back section of the booklet. The edges are worn and the paper is yellowing. There are some wrinkled spots that suggest that the letter was read many times. The creases on the pages are especially worn on pages three and four; so much that there are holes and tears where the paper was folded. Stringfield’s signature barely fits on the fourth page.

The second letter is also written on a fiber-based lined paper with 8 x 10 dimensions. This paper is a thicker grade than the paper of the first letter. It also has an emblem embossed in the upper left corner. The page appears to have been torn from a notebook or split from a wider piece of paper. It has three vertical folds and one horizontal fold. It spans two pages. The second page is written on the back of the first page. The close of the letter is cross-written on the top of the first page in the vacant white space. The pages of this letter are also yellowing, but it is considerably less-worn than the first letter probably because of the higher grade paper.

Stringfield’s writing is mostly legible. His hand notably slants to the right. His individual characters contain several loops that add to the elegance of his penmanship. Some letters to note include the cross bar of his “t” is usually placed very high on the ascender, and sometimes, misses contact with the ascender altogether. Instances of double “s” in words are written like a “ps.” His style is very emphatic, and he relies heavily on underlined words to convey his point.

For my edition of these letters I have tried to provide the most readable account possible. I have standardized spelling throughout the letters. There are moments when Stringfield commits spelling errors, but there are also moments when specific letters in words are not clear. To avoid confusion, the spelling has been corrected. Stringfield’s punctuation is not always clear. There are times when his periods and commas are almost identical. I have used context clues to standardize punctuation to the best of my abilities. I have not, however, added punctuation where it is lacking. Instead of writing the word “and,” Stringfield uses an ampersand. I have maintained his use of this symbol when it is used. His paragraph breaks are also difficult to discern. At times they are just long breaks between words in the text. He also uses the standard indentations for paragraphs. At other times the indentations are positioned very closely to the margins of the page. Where Stringfield has underlined words for emphasis, I have italicized them. In instances where he underlines words twice, I have italicized and underlined the words. Stringfield also misuses apostrophes throughout his letters. I have included them where they are necessary, and I have omitted them where they were used unnecessarily. I have also standardized capitalization of proper nouns where it is missing and maintained any capitalization that Stringfield has included in his letters. My transcriptions of the letters themselves do not retain Stringfield’s line breaks, but I have indicated page breaks within this edition in bold font. I have also attempted to keep the formatting of Stringfield’s postscripts true to the original document.
Stringfield Love Letters Transcription

Letter 1 Page 1

Asheville No. [6a?]

July, 8\textsuperscript{th} 1865.

Miss M.M. Love\textsuperscript{1}

My very dear Lady

Since you fully understand me a suitor for your heart and hand, I cannot think it improper to address you thus.

Indeed I conceive it altogether my duty to give you as full an insight as possible into my character, and to acquaint you with the governing impulses of my nature, my station in life and family, connections. As to my own private character and the respectability of my family, I can only say that I do not wish to shun the strictest scrutiny. I can refer your friends to the best families of west N.C. & E. Tenn\textsuperscript{2}. and to some of your own kindred, with whom I have spent much time during the last three years.

I met you first, as you may remember, over four years since, at your sister’s in E. Tenn.\textsuperscript{3} I had heard of you often, and always in praise, before it was my pleasure to form your acquaintance, and I can truly say that my expectations were more than realized.

I was \textit{very much} pleased with you, the more I saw of you, heard of you, and \textit{thought} of you, the more I liked, respected, \textsuperscript{1} Maria Melvina Love. According to The Annals of Haywood County, Stringfield “married Maria M. Love, a daughter of James R. Love of Waynesville” (474).

\textsuperscript{2} Stringfield was born in Nashville, Tennessee, but spent his childhood in Strawberry Plains, Tennessee located on the borders of Jefferson, Knox and Sevier Counties (Annals of Haywood County) (Tennessee State Map). He moved to North Carolina in 1872.

\textsuperscript{3} Likely the home of Maria’s sister Sarah, known as Sallie, who was married to William Holland Thomas, the commander of Stringfield’s unit during the Civil War (Godbold 104).
and admired, and the more I became satisfied that you were an object worthy of my love – worthy the admiration and love of the noblest and bravest of the land.

My admiration ripened into love, and but for the very cold reception my advances met with, I should have followed you to your “mountain home” and declared my passion then and there.

Very soon afterwards however, the late terrible war commenced. I was a young man, and I felt it my duty to respond to my country’s call. I thought of you, of the other loved ones at home, I thought of property, of health, of limbs, of life, of Honor – but I felt it my duty to sacrifice all but honor for my state and section. I felt that I would be unworthy of the love of a noble woman were I to shrink.

I volunteered as a private – served twelve months as such, was afterwards promoted to officer of honor and trust. I passed through many sanguinary conflicts, through much hardship and encountered many strong temptations, but a merciful and ever ruling Providence carried me safe through all. I now return to those I love a wiser

---

4 Research was unable to corroborate the “mountain home.” It is likely somewhere in Western North Carolina or Eastern Tennessee.
5 Stringfield is referring to the Civil War (1861-1865).
6 His unit during the war. He became a part of the Walker’s Battalion, Thomas Legion that served in Virginia and Western North Carolina during the war (Brown 377). This unit was also known as the Sixty-Ninth Regiment of North Carolina Infantry (The Annals of Haywood County).
7 Stringfield became a Major and was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel on March 6, 1865 (Brown 377).
8 Stringfield was captured in Knoxville, Tennessee in May 1865. He was released after 24 days after taking an Oath of Allegiance, presumably to the Government of the United States and its Constitution (Brown 377).
9 This is likely an allusion to the God of the Bible based on context clues and Stringfield’s capitalization of the word.
and better – yet sadder man, unscathed in all except Property – that is mostly gone.

Now that I present myself before you as a suppliant for you love and favor, what have I to offer in exchange for so priceless a gem?

I come with a full knowledge of my own frailties & flaws of character – weakness of mind – ungainliness of person, but I come as I think with a heart full of manly love.

I come as a man to woo a woman, I come as an honest man wishing a noble, virtuous, beautiful and accomplished wife! I come because I love you above all women on earth, because I know you are worthy of my soul, because I believe that if you will love me I can & will make you happy through life. My love is higher, deeper and broader than a mere boyish passion for a pretty girl. I come to you my dearest Maria with a man’s love, seeking a woman’s true love in return. Let me hope and pray that I woo not in vain – give me some hopes, some assurances that you are not entirely indifferent towards me, that before all others I am kindly thought of by you. With such assurances as these I’ll be happy. I can face the stern realities of life cheerfully with bright anticipations of future bliss. I do not close my eyes to the fact that the future is clouded with many dark shadows – not shadows altogether, either, but real trouble to those of us who so warmly espoused the cause of the South in the late war. My determination is to hope and pray for strength and true manhood to overcome all trial and difficulties. I am satisfied that married life, between kindred spirits, will not be conducive of more trouble than the corresponding strength and spirit of endurance and forbearance given to the partners by a kind & ever ruling
If dark shadows do close around – love, confidence and honest toil will dispel them and usher in “joy unspeakable” and happiness unalloyed.

Those my dearest Lady are some of the sentiments of my heart, not very elegantly expressed – but honestly so I trust. Think of them and of me with as much leniency and forbearance as possible. I have much more to say if you will permit me to write again. I hope you will. I hope to be allowed to visit you soon and often, but wish to prevent as far as possible your becoming an object of “village gossip”.

With renewed assurances of love & esteem I am truly yours

William. W. Stringfield

---

Dearest Maria

I am very sad to think that I will soon have to leave you. You are uppermost in my mind & heart all the time.

I wish – oh so much! that we had parted for the last time till our hearts are made one before the world! I wish that instead of going alone to Tenn you were going with me as my loving bride – my sweet solace and affectionate companion. But these wishes are useless now, I must content myself to wait. But how long dearest one must I wait? how long shall my lonely

---

10 Likely a reference to the God of the Bible based on context clues and Stringfield’s capitalization of the word.
11 From 1 Peter 1:8 “Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory” (Bible Gateway KJV).
12 Over a year after the first letter of this edition.
13 Tennessee.
heart count the tardy hours that separate us? In our conversation last evening, you said that you hoped I would agree to postpone our marriage\(^{14}\) beyond the time I have heretofore named – early this winter – I do hope you will not insist on this. If possible I would hasten rather than delay, I would speed the time rather than delay an hour. I ask you again, do not let matters of minor importance cause you to hesitate.

I want no parade or pomp when we are united – it will be a happy – a blissful hour to me, and I trust so to you, but it will be a sacred and holy hour, an hour in which our united hearts shall call a Savior’s\(^{15}\) blessing upon ourselves – an hour in which we should hope to receive the kind wishes of living friends mingled with the spiritual blessing & prayers of dear departed loved ones. Do you not believe that we are watched over by Christian loved ones gone before? I certainly do. The images of my dear sainted father and angel mother are ever at hand to rebuke me for my many wicked thoughts and deeds. Notwithstanding all this however I feel my great depravity – my unworthiness. I feel the Continued watch of a sweet Christian woman as my help\(^{16}\) – my comforter, my Companion. I want someone – you – to twine a pure hearts affection around my faulty life. I want you to raise my heart up – purify – chasten – Then why need we wait? Why defer longing when our hearts are united and beating alone for each other?

Letter 2 Page 2

---

\(^{14}\) According to the marriage license from North Carolina County Registers of Deeds, Stringfield and Love were not married until 1871, five years after he wrote this letter.

\(^{15}\) A possible allusion to Ephesians 5:21-33, especially verses 22-25, “Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband in the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body. Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it” (Bible Gateway KJV).

\(^{16}\) Likely a reference to Genesis 2:18, “And the Lord God said, It is not good that man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him” (Bible Gateway KJV).
Tell me my precious one, why need we wait longer? November is a long while off.

December is longer. I do not doubt your love – but you know that the longer delayed the more uncertain. Some of your friends will oppose to the bitter end – everything will be done against me that can be done – once married we are safe.

Letter 2 Page 3 (written cross-line to finish)

Write me a good long letter in reply to this. Speak freely, for my heart is all yours – tell me what you think – trust me fully – for I have trusted you. Write me a good loving letter – no eye but my own shall ever scan its precious pages, have it ready when I call Wednesday – tomorrow evening.

Good bye

Your devoted

William

---

17 The end of this letter is cross-written on the top of page one in the available white space. Stringfield makes this section extremely readable.
Works Cited

Provided a timeline of Stringfield’s life including his marriage to Maria M. Love.

An account of the members of Thomas’s Legion and their ventures. It provides information about Stringfield’s experiences during the war.

This book details Stringfield’s unit from the Civil War. It provides helpful information about Stringfield’s connections and how he met his wife.

Used Bible Gateway to find the quoted section of the letter in the common Biblical version of Stringfield’s time.

A microfilm of W.W. Stringfield and Maria M. Love’s marriage license. Includes the date and witnesses.

A state map of Tennessee used to determine the location of Strawberry Plains where Stringfield grew up.
Western Carolina University. “William Williams Stringfield.” Western Carolina University.

Western Carolina University, 2015. Web. 29 Nov. 2015.

This cite provided crucial biographical information for William Williams Stringfield. It was very helpful in the process of decoding his letters. It also led to the helpful sources found in WCU’s Special Collections.
Ashland, Me. 1807.

M’lop M. M. Love,
My Very Dear Lady,

I am, you truly understand me a letter for your heart and hand, I cannot think of improper to address you thus.

Indeed I consider it as my duty to give you as full an insight as possible into my character, and to acquaint you with the growing impatience of my nature, my situation in life, and family connections, as to my own private character and the respectability of my family. I can only say that I do not wish to blunder the strictest secrecy.

I can refer your friend to the best families of N. C. if you wish to become of your own kindness, with whom I have spent much time during the last three years. I meet you first as you may remember, over four years since, at your sisters in Exeter. I had known of you often and always in person, before it was my pleasure to form your acquaintance, since I can truly say that my expectations were more than realized.

I was very much pleased with you, the more I saw of you, knew of you, and thought of you. The more I liked, the more and admired, and the more I became satisfied that you were an object worthy of my love - another the admiration and love of the noblest and bravest of the land.
My admiration ripened into love, and but for the very cold reception my advances met with, I should have followed you to your "Mountain home" and declared my passion then and there. Very soon afterwards however the late terrible wars commenced, I was a young man, and felt it my duty to respond to my Country's call. I thought of you, of the other loved ones at home, of your health, of my future, of bank.
I thought of you - but it fell my duty to serve in all but home for our State and Section. I felt that I would be unworthy the love of a noble woman were I to shrink.
I volunteered as a private - served twelve months as such, was afterwards promoted to offices of honor and trust, - I passed through many arduous conflicts, through much hardship and endurance, many strong temptations, but a Merciful and ever-willing Providence carried me through all.
I now return to those I love in amity.
and better - yes better man, more or less in all except Property - that is entirely gone.

Now that I present myself before you as a supplement for your love and favor, what have I to offer in exchange for so fine a jewel? I come with a full knowledge of my own faults & flaws of character weariness of mind - confounding of purpose, but I come as I think with a heart full of genuine love. I come as a man to woo a woman. I come as an honest man writing a noble, virtuous, beautiful and accomplish wife. I come because I have you alone all mine or nothing, because I know you are worthy of my love. because I believe that if you will love me I can I will make you happy through life. My love is higher deeper broader than a mere boyish passion for a pretty girl. I come to you my dear Maria with a man's love, seeking a renowned love in return. Let me hope and pray that I am not in vain. Give me these hopes, some assurance that you are not entirely indifferent toward me, that before all others I am kindly thought of by you. With love... assurances on these I'll be happy. I can face the three realities of life cheerfully with might anticipations of future bliss! I do not close my eyes to the fact that the Future is clouded with many dark shadows but Shade, altogether in either, is a real trouble to those of us who do sincerely espouse the cause of the South in the late war. My determination is to hope and trust the real true manhood to me around all trials and difficulties. I am satisfied that married life between kindred spirits will not be injudicious of mine trouble than the corresponding Strength and Spirit of endurance and inference - for to the heart is a home at.
My only Comfort. If death should close around - love, confidence and trust still will dispel them and make in joy unrepeatable and transport as well.
Those my dearest Lady are some of the sentiments of my heart, not very elegantly expressed but simply so I trust. I think by them out of me with as much firmness and forbearance as possible. I have much more to say if you will permit me to write again. I hope you will. I hope to be allowed to visit you somewhow often, but wish to prevent as much possible your becoming an object of village gossip.
With second assurances of love William J. Stringfield

William Williams Stringfield to Maria M. Love: Letter 1 Page 4
William Williams Stringfield to Maria M. Love: Letter 2 Page 1, Page 3 cross written. be a sacred and holy hour, an hour in which our united hearts shall call our Saviour, hoping upon ourselves, our hour in which we should hope to receive the kind wishes of living friends mingled with the spiritual blessing through of dear departed loved ones. Do you not believe that we are watched over by christian loved ones gone before? I certainly do. The image of my dear sainted father and angel mother are ever at hand to rebuke and for my many wicked thoughts and deeds. Notwithstanding all this however I feel my hearts deplore my mistakes. I feel the continued need of a sweet christian man as my helper, my comforter, my companion. I would love me - you - to turn where hearts affection around my faulty life. I want you to raise my heart up-purify - chasten - heal why need me wait? Why linger longer where hearts are visited and beating alone for each other? Tell me my precious one, why need we wait longer? November is a long while off. December is longer. Do not doubt your love - but you know that the longer delayed the more uncertain. Some of your friends will oppose to the bitter end - every thing will be done against me that can be done - with mission we are lost.